Scenario

Starter:

If you could go back in time, where would you go back to and why?

You have 1 minute in an elevator
with your prime minister - what do you say? Improvise!

If you became the mayor of your hometown, what is the first thing you would want to change?

Imagine being in the shoes of your grandparents. Why do they think the way they do about the world and politics?

Imagine a person not from the planet asked you to explain the concept of democracy to them. How would you do this, in either words or movements?

You have been given 30 seconds to speak during a popular national tv show. Which one is it and what would you say? Improvise?

A good friend of yours is spreading fake information online. How would you react?

You are an international politician. What would your social media bio say?

You're magically able to add anybody from the history of the planet to one of your group chats. Which chat, who would it be, and why?

You have been selected to be the next UN Secretary General (able to coordinate around global issues). What would you like to focus on this year?

If you could build a perfect world from scratch, how would you make sure as many people are as happy as possible? Speak on it for 2 minutes.

Imagine you are organising an event in your town for international guests. How might you make your participants feel welcomed?

You've been given a task - to convince a dictator to try out "democracy"
using one sentence. What do you say?

Imagine being in charge of the educational system in your country. What do you want the future generations to learn better?

Imagine being a professor or researcher at a university. Describe one issue that you would want to focus on for your career and why.

Personal

Starter:

What's something that makes you feel happy?

Think about the three values most important to you and then go around the group and share.

How do you think the ways in which you grew up shape the values that are important to you?

What piece of literature, music or art has changed the way that you think. How and why?

If you could suggest any book/movie to everyone in the world, what would it be and why?

Describe one moment or event during the last week (big or small) that made you feel hopeful.

Tell the group about one person that you admire who makes the world a better place.

What makes you feel included and why?

What does nature mean to you? If possible, share a memory related to this.

What advice would you give to everyone if you could?

What individual daily habits do you think would change the world if more people of us engage in it?

Describe yourself in 3 words. Then describe the person to your left in 3 words.

When was the last time you did something brave? Why did you do it and how did you feel?

How connected do you feel to other people? Would you like to change something about this?

What is something that someone has said to you that you will always remember?

Hot Topic

Starter:

Share an example of something (i.e. a performance, speech, artwork, song, etc) which you think has made an impact on politics or society.

Do you vote? Why or why not?
And if you do, how do you decide on who to vote for?

You as a group have been given 10 billion euros to improve the world with. How do you distribute it? Do you think this will be effective?

You are starting a new political party as a group.
What is your name and your most important goals?

Should billionaires exist? Why or why not?

Do you think you live in a true democracy? If not, what would need to change?

What social norm or taboo
do you wish didn't exist?
Why and how would this be achieved? Do you think this can be achieved?

Do you think it's possible to fund healthcare for all within your current system? If not, what should be prioritised and how?

What should your country do about national inequality?
What about global inequality?

In what ways does artificial intelligence (as it exists right now) make the world a better or worse place? Do you think its existence is justified or not?

What do you think about the military? In what cases do you think the money and resources that are put into it can be justified or not?

Do you think social media is a force for more good or not? Why?

With the climate crisis intensifying, how should we balance the needs people today with our responsibility to future generations?

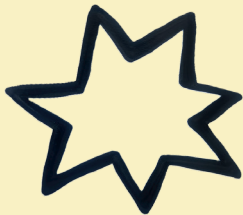

How do you think fake news and disinformation affects people and issues in your country? How do you yourself know what to trust and what not to?

Do you think "freedom" really exists? Why or why not?

Wildcard

Starter:

Count "3, 2, 1..." together, then every player says any word (in any language) at the same time! Then go around the group and explain a little more about the word that came to you.

Go around the group, taking turns to ask the person on your right
one question that you would really like to know about them.

Explore your surroundings and take some time to grab (or indicate to) an item that you think relates to your current values. Come back and go around the group, sharing what you have chosen and why.

Write down a question each, fold and put together all the papers and then distribute randomly. Go around the group one by one, answering the questions you unfolded individually.

Write down your name, fold and put these together and then distribute randomly. On the paper you unfolded, write down something that you appreciate or admire about that person. Once everyone is done, return the papers for each person to read (this can be in private if preferred)

Answer the next question with your eyes closed: imagine that your group can implement a magical spell that lasts for 24 hours for the benefit of the world. What is the spell you'll cast and why?

Take a moment... close your eyes and breathe deeply for a minute or two. Take your time, and when everyone has opened their eyes again, share a little about where your mind may have wandered.

Answer the next question in order of your birthdays: Share an example of something from another country that you wish could be implemented in more places.

If every member of this group were to be represented by a flavour of ice cream, which would you all be? This should be decided by everyone except the person who the flavour relates to Answer the next question around the group, each saying only 5 words beginning with a letter chosen by the player to your right: What would your ideal world be like?

Answer the next question with each person around the group saying one word at a time, forming a collective "story" relating to how you feel about capitalism...

Cover your ears. Count down from "3, 2, 1..." together and then say out loud something you really hope for or dream about (all at the same time, in any language).

Afterwards, without clarifying what you said, share how you feel or felt.

Think about a person you would like to reach out to. If you feel comfortable, share who and why with the group. Take a moment at the end of this round for anyone who would like to send a quick message to this person if possible (i.e. by phone).

Answer the next question as a person that you know and admire (then explain who that is): What's the most important thing about being human?

Exchange phones randomly among all group members. Split up and record a short video of something sweet or interesting for the person whose phone you have. (If preferred, you can use paper instead.)
